ing of passenger carrying vessels, a fitting opportunity presents itself for calling atten- city. tion to another matter in connection with steamers in these parts which wants reformation. We allude to boilers, and the great | ed: hopes are entertained of saving the vessel necessity which exists here for having them properly inspected. In all ports of the United Kingdom, a regular survey is made by Board of Trade men every six months, but we have nothing of that sort here. It is not at all pleasant to know, but nevertheless it is a fact, that many of the boilers of steamers trading regularly in China waters are work- fered, and we make no doubt that the performing day after day in a most unsafe state, and | ers will take care to be at their best. in one which, were they to enter any homeharbour, they would either be altogether condemned, or would have their working pressure Ground, to bear the charms the band-displayed. very much reduced. This is, no doubt, owing in a great measure to the men in charge of there will be a continuance of the music every. them. In China, every engineer has to be Monday, until the Regiment's departure from his own surveyor, and it is not too much to say that many of them are quite unfit to act in such a capacity, for to be so requires long | that the steamer Macgregor, got somewhat badly experience with machinery and boilers, (Fiji) on the 26th February. Assistance was coupled with a thoroughly scientific educa- | rendered to her by two steamers in succession, tion. According to the Merchant Shipping Amendment Act 1862, every steamship which she would float off the shoal, when he would has a master possessing a certificate from the proceed to Sydney without delay. Board of Trade must also have an engineer possessing a certificate of competency from the same authority. But on the coast of telegram: China even this guarantee is quietly ignored. for any person, qualified or not, may be ap- copy of a telegram received late on Sunday pointed engineer of a steamer, and some night :-British vessels have been trading along these shores whose engines have been solely in charge of Chinamen. We do not wish at all to underestimate the abilities of the natives. but we think it may very safely be presumed or contradicted this statement—up to date not that those acting in that way know very little indeed about the strength of boilers or the strains upon them, or about increstation, corrosion, the chemical properties of water, galvanic action, and many other similar subjects with which the engineer of every steamer ought to be conversant. It will thus be at once apparent that Chinese ought not to be placed in a position ipon the proper fulfilment of the duties which so many lives sometimes depend. But independently altogether of the competence of engineers either foreign or native, a Sur--veyor is much needed. Boilers are sometimes put into steamers in such a way that some of their parts to which it is necessary which is working well. In spite of every effort to attend are quite inaccessible, and thus the prospects of serious famine are very severe where an engineer might run the risk, a upon sufficient alterations. Or, again, suppose an engineer to be fully aware that his boilers, having deteriorated from hard work or probably from hard usage, fare being worked at too high a pressure, sometimes the owners or agents will not allow it to be reduced, as they know the vessel would lose in speed, and thus the risk is run, the engineer continuing to acquiesce rather than throw Coast near Colom'o, on Friday the 3rd.

do not take the matter up. In England, those companies who insure boilers, and who issue policies covering all damage that may arise from an explosion, employ competent surveyors to examine periodically all boilers insured by them. The statistics issued by them show that amongst the boilors insured, and consequently surveyed, accidents are very rare indeed; while mishaps to those uninsured are of much more frequent occurrence. But the point applies more directly to those societies who insure the vessel as a whole. Their surveyors make sea connections, screw shafting and boilers -are never surveyed at all, and many a steamer is insured as a first class risk, where in reality the risk is very great. An instance of the very great importance of having some one independent of the vessel to see occasionally to the proper working order of her different parts, was brought out in the recent loss of the Ville du Havre. The leading mechanical journal at home-The Engineerin commenting upon the sad catastrophe, believed that the water-tight sluice and other doors in the bulkheads were not in proper working order, or the ship could never have foundered in so short a time. One of the engineers in his evidence at the enquiry stated | month. that he endeavoured to shut the most important one, but could not, the pressure of bulkhead doors are constructed in such a way that if in good working order this could have been impossible. The result, therefore, arrived at is that but for want of proper care in seeing to the continual efficiency of he neked him what it was, and what he was Inspector Grey deposed to uscompanying the some of these constructions, many more might have been saved. The proper operation of these water tight bulkhead doors are looked upon as most necessary by the surveyors, who, when making axaminations, Orders for Copies may, he sent to the Daily | frequently stand with watch in hand to ascertain accurately what despatch is necessary for their working. > engineer of the Ville du Haure. We have heard it remarked that China is a fine field for engineers who through misconduct or incapacity have had their certificates cancelled at home. No doubt it is, because they can and do come out here, and, owing to the scarcity of qualified men, get situations at once. But it is high time that some attention was directed to the subject. We do not want any half measures, the same as is the case at Singapore. The matter is of vital importance, and a thoroughly competent surveyor ought to be appointed, and the whole matter set upon a satisfactory footing. It was not until some thirty or forty Chinamen went down in the Wan Loong, that any notice was taken of the overloading of passenger steamers. Let us hope that it will not require the catastrophe of a boiler explosion to 45 catties. draw the attention of the proper authorities to the necessity of the appointment of

HORRIBLE TRAGEDY IN SINGAPORE (Singapore Times, April 16th.) A terrible double murder and murderous assault was yesterday evening, committed in the Cumpong Krabow district. A Bengallee serang named Moobarrak, living in Albert street, had some trouble with his wife, a native of Mulacea. who had, we understand, prosecuted him it the Police Court for ill-treatment. About o'clock yesterday evening, he rushed upon inflicting a mortal injury, and then turning upon another woman in the house, drew the knife directly across ber face, making a gash from car-to car, and then ran out into the street. The alarm was raised, and several persons ran to check his progress, whom the unrderer assniled with his knife as they obstructed his way, One of these, a convict, received such injuries that he died shortly after reaching hospital. No less than five persons in all were more or less injured by the assas sin, who ended by cutting his own throat

PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. AA ANGLO-CHINESE DICTIONARY, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accente being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work. following facts are submitted for consideration. this work contains more than 50,000 English ters. Again, despite all the grammar, and student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. THE STATUE OF BACCHUS (Translated by Mrs. E. P. Cosens, in St. James' Magazine Callisthenes, a gay Athenian youth, After a night of revelry came home, With withered by twined among his looks Disorder'd; faltering in the early dawn, Himself like morning twilight wild and rale. When through the lasty colonnade the slave Lighted his master's way to seek his couch. All suddenly in the bright torch's glare, The murble form of Bacchus stood reveal'd. Godlike, created by a master's hand, In youthful beauty rose the shape divine, And through the wealth of long and curling locks Gleam'd furth the sculptured shoulders finely arch'd: And 'meath the shade of a luxuriant wreath Of vine-leaves and rich clusters of ripe grapes, Appear'd the wine-God's round and blooming face,

Awed and abash'd, Callisthenes shrank back

Before the vision's dazzling excellence.

Extracts.

It seem'd to him, as if with Thyrsus' wand The God in punishment had touch'd his brow; As if the moving lips spake angrily: "What doest thou here; thou helpless faltering ghost; With brain a erclouded, shade of Ercbus P. Thou hast my sacred ivy-wreath profaned. And call'st thyself my pricet in blasphemy; Away from me! I know not what thou art. and the fulness of creating nature. .. Which rich and godlike in the noble blood Of clustering grapes chiefly reveals itself. If thy wild impulses desire a god, " ... Seek him not on the sunny vine clad hill. No! rather seek him in dim Hades' night'!" The god no longer spake, the torchlight died; The youth, reproved and shamed, stole to his couch. The wither'd ivy plucking from his brows; And silently, in his soul's inner depths, At that lone hour, he vow'd a sacred yow.

AN AFGHAN ON NOTE TAKING.
